EEC Aides Agree to Develop A Common Policy on Energy

BRUSSELS, Sept. 17 (UPI) .--Ministers of the European Economic Community today agreed to develop a common energy policy. French Foreign Minister Jean Sauva nargues, who presided at the meeting of the nine-nation community's foreign ministers, said that the agreement "ex-pressed the political intent of the community to start its own energy policy."

Earlier attempts to frame an energy policy failed in July when Britain vetoed a set of principles and guidelines prepared by the EEC Executive Commission, because it felt the draft stressed too much the existence of the Common Market as an autonomous body. EEC officials said that today's agreement was made possible when Britain's partners dropped such references and instead called for a "close coordination of tha member states, enabling the community to progressively express a join view on problems touching on cooperation with producing countries and with the other consuming countries." The agreement called for the calculation of joint consumption and production targets to direct national policies and guide the EEC's energy producers and con-

Japanese Terrorists Fly Out After Releasing All Hostages

Three armed Japanese Red Army terrorists ended their siege of the French Embassy here tonight, released the ambassador and eight other men they had held since Friday and left the Nether-lands by air. They were reported to be heading to Damascus.

Dutch Finance Minister Willem Duisenberg said on national tele-vision that they were given $300. 000 ransom, but he did not say who had paid the money. The French government had rejected a demand for $1 million,

The terrorists were accompanied on an Air France Boeing 707 by a Red Army comrade, Yutaka Furuya, who was released from a French prison a few bours after they took over the embassy last Friday. A Dutch pilot and first officer and a British engineer were the plane's volunteer crew. No Advance Notice

Officials at Schiphol Airport. midway between Amsterdam and The Hague, said it was uncertain whether authorities at Damascus would let the aircraft land. Syrian government officials said they had no advance notice of the flight.

Transavia Holland BV, the Dutch supplemental airline that supplied volunteers to fly the aircraft, said it could stay airborne for at least 8 1/2 hours. This would include all of the Middle East and a good part of northern Africa," said a spokes-

Mr. Schard was reunited with said he "didn't look too tired" after his ordeal of just over 100 hours. The terrorists abandoned three hostages in the embassy. All hostages were reported to be in satisfactory condition. Two women hostages were released early yesterday.

The Transavia pilot, Capt. Henderikus Slerks, and his crew met with the terrorists in the embassy today to work out details of the escape. The other crewmen were co-pilot Ruud van de Zwaal and flight engineer Barry Knight.

The end of the drama began as the terrorists, the ambassador and five other hostages came into the lobby of the French Embassy from the top floor, their location since the episode began. The ambassador's hands were bound, but the other hostages held their hands above their heads.

The terrorists herded their six ceptives out of the embassy twoby-two and at gunpoint. Once inside a dark-blue police bus, they smashed the windows to command a clear field of fire. Escorted by four police motorcycle outriders, the bus covered the 30-minute drive to the airport without incident.

Dutch officials were reluctant to give details of the agreement that prompted the terrorists to surrender their hostages, but a Transavia spokesman said the terrorists had agreed to exchange three hostages for the aircraft, three more for the crew and the remaining three-including the ambassador-for Furuya. Furuya is a Red Army memsince July. After his arrest, he told French authorities that he had been sent to France to carry out terrorist attacks against French targets.

$450-Million Pact Ready for Signing

Kuwait Said to Plan U.S. Arms Deal

By Jim Hoagland BEIRUT, Sept. 17 (WP) .- Kuwait is to sign a contract this week for $450 million in American arm, and equipment including advanced-design Hawk surface-to-air missiles, and will soon open final negotiations for American fighter-bombers, Arab military sources said today. The Kuwaiti decision to buy American warplanes instead of British Jaguar aircraft represents a commercial and strategic victory for the United States in tha escalating race to sell arms and gain influence in the oil-rich countries of the Persian Gulf. But the pending negotiations empliesize a growing American dilemma on arms sales to Arab countries. Prospective Arab customers are reportedly pres for more sophisticated fighters with greater range and firepower than Washington appears to be willing to provide.

Strong reaction from Israel and its supporters in Washington can be expected if the Arab desires are met. But Arab military analysts are saying privately that the United cused even by its Arat friends of trying to pawn off inferior goods on the Arabs and thereby losing sales that would help the economically depressed American aerospace industry and give the United Slates more leverage in the Arab world.

Kuwait, which is involved in a st-billion expansion of its tiny armed forces, has already rebuffed American efforts to push the Northrop F-5E in sales necotiations that began nearly 18 months ago.

The Kuwaitis turned toward the British Jaguars rather than accept the smaller plane. But American hints that a large arms package deal would imply a strengthening of American-Kuwaiti defense ties, and a willingness to offer larger aircraft, have brought the Kuwaitis back around to committing themselves to buy American.

Kuwait, which is concerned about a continuing Russian arms buildup in neighboring Iraq, is shopping for 38 fighter-bombers to go with a squadron of French Mirage F-Is ordered earlier this rear.

Skybawk and Corsair

American planes under discussion are the McDonnell-Douglas Skyhawk, one of the mainstays of the Israeli Air Force, and the more recent. longer-range LTV (Ling-Temco-Vought) A-7 Cor-

The Corsair, a Navy light attack bomber, is capable of reaching the borders of Israel from Kuwait. It has been exported to only a few countries in Western Europe.

The Pentagon is said to bave recommended to Kuwait the A-4. an older model of the Skyhawk than that possessed by the Israelis. Who have made significant modifications in the aircraft.

In Saudi Arabia, the United States faces a similar problem. King Paisal is reported by reliable Arab sources to be under pressure from young Saudi pilots and high-ranking Egyptian officers who have taken on a formal advisory role in Saudi Arablan arms purchases to reject American efforts to sell 32 F-5Es to the Saudi Air Force.

The Saudis have been rankled by reports circulating in Rivadh that a U.S. Defense Department evaluation team that visited Saudi Arabia this summer concluded that Saudi pilots are not sufficiently prepared to handle and maintain more sophisticated aircraft. The team reportedly stressed the ease of maneuverability and maintenance of the F-5E, which is in wide use in developing countries.

Saudi Arabia has purchased three squadrons of the Northron fighter on order and would like to build its air force to 200 combat aircraft. It has already ordered deep-penetration French Mirage bombers, which Arab observers here believe are destined for Egypt.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat recently said that triendly countries were buying warplanes for him to replace Egyptian losses in the October war with Israel.

The Saudi and Kuwaiti purchases form part of a heated arms-buying campaign that is turning the Persian Gulf into a gigantic armory. Arab oil-pro-ducers have already committed themselves to buying more than $2.7 billion worth of planes, missiles, tanks and other conjoment from the United States and Western Europe this year.

Iraq is reported by Western diplomats to be receiving about $1 billion in arms Supplies from the Soviet Union this year, and neighboring non-Arab Iran has placed orders for more than $2.5 billion in arms.

Kuwait will be filling its immediate priority of air defense by signing a $125-million contract with Raytheon this week in Kuwait for Superhawk missiles, an advanced version of the air defense weapon already supplied to Israel and Saudi Arabia and which Jordan is seeking. The balaree of the contract will be for radar, computer systems and buildings to support the air defense system. Yugoslavia will also help Kuwait build airport facilities under a separate contract to be signed this week.

India Will Pledge Not to Use U.S. Uranium for A-Blasts

By John W. Finney

(NYT).—India is prepared to give assurances that none of the nuclear fuel it obtains from the United States will be used for conducting atomic explosions, a spokesman for the Atomic Energy Commission has disclosed.

As a result, the spokesman said, the United States plans to continue the shipment of enriched uranium fuel for the Tarapur atomic power plant that was built in India with American technical and financial assistance

The United States had threatened to cut off the supply of atomic fuel unless India gave assurances that the plutonium produced in the power plant would not be used in any type of nuclear explosion. The United States had sought the assurances after India last May detorated what it described as a peaceful nuclear explosion with pintonium that it had obtained in a reactor supplied by Canada.

Initially, according to officials. India refused to provide specific assurances, giving instead what officials regarded as an ambiguous, unresponsive reply to an American letter. The issue was raised again in discussions in Vienna in the last few days hetween Dixie Lee Ray, chairman of the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission, and Homi Sethma chairman of the Indian Atomic Energy Commission. The two officials are in Vienna to attend a meeting of the International Atomic Energy Agency.

Reply Seen Soon As a result of those discussions. an AEC spokesman here said, "We are expecting the necessary assurances shortly" from the Indian government. In the assurances, according to the spokesman, the Indian government would specify that any plutonium produced in the reactor would be used only as fuel in the Tarapur power plant, thus ruling out the diversion of the fissionable material into an explosive device. On the basis of the anticipated assurances, the spokesman said. the AEC is proceeding with plans

May. Shortly after the explosion India entered into an agreement for atomic cooperation with Argentina. The timing of the agreement so shortly after the Indian explosion may have been coincidental, in the opinion of American officials.

Officials of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, however, are following implementation of the cooperative agreewith some concern since both nations are regarded as likely to acquire atomic weapons. Neither has signed the nuclear nonproliferation treaty, which prohibits a nation from acquiring atomic weapons.

Review of Policy The growing prospect of pro-liferation of atomic weapons has prompted a high-level policy review within the administration, It was disclosed yesterday. Under Secretary of State Joseph Sisco said at a joint meeting of two House Foreign Affaire subcommittees that the policy re-view, to be conducted under the leadership of the State Department and the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, had been ordered recently by the National Security Council,

Mr. Sisco appeared before the subcommittees to defend the proposed sale of atomic power plants to Israel and Egypt, a plan worked out by former President Richard Nixon during his trip to the Middle East last spring. Mr. Sisco said that negotiations with the two countries on safeguard agreements covering the atomic power plants were pro-ceeding more slowly than had been expected. The Egyptians, he said, had raised a number of "technical questions" about a draft agreement that the United States submitted in June and then subsequently revised. Report Deplores Jail Conditions In West Bengal

LONDON, Sept. 17 (Reuters) .-Amnesty International has re-ported that thousands of political prisoners in the Indian state of West Bengal had been held without trial since 1871 in grossly overcrowded conditions.

A nine-page report by the Londun-based civil rights organiza-tion said some prisoners had been kept in chains for up to two VERIE. It said serious allegations of

Greece Reported Planning to Lift Its Ban on Keds

ATHENS, Sept. 17 (AP) .- A Greek government source said yesterday that a decree will be issued later this week ending a 38-year ban against the Greek Communist party.

The decrees would provide for the "unhindered" operation of all political parties, the source said. He said that the date of the elections would be indicated. Premier Constantine Caramanits has said that elections will be

Haig Said to Have Persuaded Ford to Alter Pardon Stance

By Everett R. Holles SAN CLEMENTE, Calif., Sept. 17 (NYT).-It was reliably reported yesterday that the White House chief of staff, Gen. Alexander Haig ir., after having been advised of the "alarming state" of Richard Nixon's health, persuaded President Ford to reverse his publicly stated position and grant an immediate pardon to the former President.

A long-time friend of Mr. Nixon identified Gen. Haig as the person "primarily responsible" for the surprise pardon, announced on Sept. 8 by President Ford. The friend, a former member of the presidential staff, is in daily touch with affairs inside Mr. Nixon's heavily guarded Casa. Pacifica estate here.

[Gen, Haig denied today that he persuaded President Ford to grant the pardon, United Press International reported in Washington. "It's all wrong," Gen. Haig said of the report that he was primarily responsible for Mr. Ford reversing his position on the issue. The general said that he had not talked with any members of the Nixon family concerning the former President's physical and emotional health.] [Acting White House Press Secretary John Hushen said that President Ford also denied the report, Reuters reported from Washington, Mr. Hushen sald that President Ford had authorized this statement: "Al Haig never discussed with me the mental or physical condition of the former President prior to my decision to grant the pardon."]

The Nixon friend said that Gen. Haig warned Mr. Ford on Aug. 29 that unless he moved quickly in announcing a full, uncondi-tional pardon, instead of waiting for legal action to be taken, it might be too late to avert what he called "a possible personal and national tragedy," Mr. Nixon's complete physical and mental collapse. Only the day before, the President had said that he would not act on a pardon until any possible legal action had been brought against Mr. Nixon for his role in the Watergate case and other federal offenses related to the

At his news conference in Washington last night, President Ford said that, before he decided to pardon Mr. Nixon, he had no edecessor's health beyond what had been reported in the news media and the observations of a member of his staff who had seen Mr. Nixon. He did not identify the staff member.

Gen. Haig, a holdover from the Nixon administration, who yesterday was named commander of NATO forces, was reported to have initiated the highly secret pardon discussions after having received reports that Mr. Nixon's physical and emotional health was deteriorating from Mr. Nix-on's daughters. The four-star general is said to have immediately discussed the reports at length in telephone conversations with Ronald Ziegler.

South Carolinian Fined for Gifts to Nixon's 1972 Race

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17 (AP). The president of a South Carolina architectural firm which designs buildings for the federal government pleaded guilty today and was fined for making illegal campaign contributions to former President Richard Nixon's 1972 re-election campaign, William Lyles sr. of Columbia, S.C., pleaded guilty on two counts would contribute to lifting Nixon's of violating federal campaign con-mental depression and worry tribution laws. He was fined $1,000 on each, the maximum fine, He also could have received a two-year sentence.

His company, LBC & W Inc., of Columbia, was fined $5,000 on another count of making filegal corporate contributions.

A statement filed in U.S. Dis-trict Court by the special Water-gate prosecutor's office said that Lyles handed out bonuses to selected employees, who were re-quired to return the money to a special fund which was in turn contributed to Nixon political closest confident. The informant said that, in convincing the President of the necessity for an immediate pardon "for the sake of not only

Mr. Nixon's health but the country's health as well," Gen. Haig nlisted the support of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

Rebozo, Abplanalp Gen. Haig was also said to have received, directly or indirectly, more alarming reports of the former President's condition from Mr. Nixon's intimate friends, Charles (Bebe) Rebozo and Robert Abplanalp.

A former counselor to Mr. Nixon said that Mr. Rebozo and Mr. Abplanalp were "really lobhying." seeking to huild a basis of sympathy for the former President, who resigned on Aug. 9. He implied that it was they who had conceived the idea of enlisting Gen, Haig's belp.

Mr. Rebozo and Mr. Abplanalp reportedly discussed the matter with Mr. Nixon's daughters and their husbands, David Eisenhower and Edward Cox, who then be-gan making public statements, first anonymously and later for direct attribution, about the seriousness of Mr. Nixon's health.

The informant, who obtained the account of Gen. Haig's role from members of the Nixon staff, said that "the deep concern of the family and their desire for some presidential action that over his uncertain future convinced Haig of the need for a prompt pardon, which he knew would come ultimately in any event." No Consultation

According to the informant, Gen. Haig prevailed upon the President not to consult in advance with Republican leaders in Congress, arguing that to do so could involve delays and com-the prosecutor.

Documenting Case' The Halg-Jaworski meeting was said to have been for the purpose

ment with Mr. Nixon.

At that time, Mr. Nixon's phlebitis was generally quiescent.

"According to the explanation here, Haig felt strongly that any advance disclosure would lead to controversy and probably congressional demands for a detailed explanation of the reasons underlying the President's abrupt decision," the informant said.

The White House chief of staff evidently feared that Congress might insist that so sweeping a pardon, affecting as it did future disclosures of Watergate events, should be anthorized by a resolution of Congress. He apparently wanted to avoid any such delay. The informant said that, even before Mr. Ford had directed his White House counsel, Philip Buchen, on Aug. 30 to learn from special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski how long might be before Mr. Nixon could be assured of an impartial trial, Gen. Haig had consulted "documenting his case" when Gen. Haig presented the proposal for an immediate "humanitarian" pardon to the President on Aug.

Soon afterward. Gen. Haig reportedly assured Mr. Nixon that "full, free and complete pardon" would be forthcoming in a matter of days. The assurance was received before the arrival here on Sept. 5 of Benton Becker, a Washington lawyer sent hy Mr.

The arguments used by Gen. Halg to sway the President reportedly dealt largely with Mr. Nixon's mental state, said to include periodic moods of depression and withdrawal, and his sometimes rambling insistence that he was not guilty of any criminal offense.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17 (AP). -The nomination of Gen. Alexander Halg jr., to be the supreme allied commander in Europe is considered certain to become a source of sharp controversy in the United States.

The resolution declared that Mr. Nixon "had the courage to make the decision he thought was best for America" in resigning the presidency on Aug. 9.

It declared that he "accomplished much during his presidency, particularly in the field of foreign affairs, as he strived to assure a generation of peace" and it said that "these remarkable accomplishments will be treated kindly by history."

The resolution made no reference to the Watergate scandals or Mr. Ford's pardoning of Mr. Nixon.

Gen. Haig rose quickly to fourstar rank-the highest peacetime rank in the U.S. Army-during Mr. Nixon's tenure in the White House. Gen. Haig was a colonel when he became Henry Kissinger's deputy on the White House National Security Council staff in 1969.

Gen. Haig is considered highly knowledgeable on European affairs. It was this knowledge that first caught the attention of Mr. Kissinger.

Gen. Haig achieved four-star rank early in last year, when he became deputy chief of staff of the Army. He retired from the Army after taking the White House post at Mr. Nixon's

When Gen. Haig's recall to active military duty was rumored two week ago, opposition arose in Congress. Some members, con-tending that shifting Gen. Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., has vowed to "strenously oppose" any move to name Gen. Haig to a top military post. He called the general "a fine officer, committed to his country and loyal to his obligations." Nevertheless, he argued, a Haig appointment would "send a clear signal throughout the military officer corps that politics pays off-and in a big way." He stressed that Gen. Haig was tryolved in White House service "during the greatest scandal the nation has ever known"-the Watergate affair.

Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., said hat "Haig has already been responsible for setting a dangerous precedent-occupying an ap-pointive political office while on active duty. We should not allow, por should this President assist him, in setting a second potentially deadly precedent that partisan politics pays off enormously for the professional military."

Gen. Haig became White House chief of staff on May 4, 1973. He resigned as Army deputy chief of staff on June 6, 1973.

Gen. Haig also has his defenders. They maintain that he was asked to serve in the White House by a president, commander to chief of the armed if not impossible, for an officer to turn down, they argue. Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz, has dismissed Sen. Proxmire's views as "partisan politics."

It is doubtful that the critics of Gen. Haig's return to active military status can block his appointment. The European post does not require congressional confirmation. Normally, top military nominees undergo such hearings, but it is because they also are receiving their fourth star at the time of the appointment.

The proposal is being pushed by Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont, who took the Senate floor yesterday to assert that a presidential order giving Mr. Nixon custody of the tapes and papers may eventually result in destruction or suppression of vital parts of the Watergate story. Sen. Mansfield wants President Ford, regardless of his agreement with Mr. Nixon on the papers, to retain physical control of them for the time being, and to see that all materials pertinent to

He said the proper storage place is the National Archives.

It was reported last week that the White House, reacting to objections by special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski, had suspended the decision to give Mr. Nixon control over the tapes and

Meanwhile, Mr. Jaworski said today that there appeared to be irgal and ethical questions about his authority to report to Congress on the possible involvement of Mr. Nixon in matters under investigation.

He sent a letter to the eight Senate Judiciary Committee members who asked him to include in his final report to Congress "a full and complete record" detailing any involvement by Mr. Nixon in the Watergate cover-up and related matters.

Mr. Jaworski said that it is his tentative belief, and that of his staff, that his authority for the issuance of reports "most likely does not justify the inclusion of detailed report on the matters you suggest."

Last U.S. POW To Be Freed by Laotians Today

VIENTIANE, Laos, Sept. 17 (AP).—Emmet James Kay, the last known American prisoner of war in Indochina, will be flown to the Philippines for a medical checkup tomorrow when he is released by the Communist Pathet Lao, the U.S. Embassy said today.
The Pathet Lao said that a

British Embassy plane would bring the 47-year-old civilian pilot to Vientiane from Sam Neus, the Pathet Lao center in northeast Laos, where he has been a captive for more than 16 months

The U.S. Embassy said that Mr. Kay would be met by his wife, Florence, at the Vientiane sir-port, and that they would be flown to the U.S. Air Force base at Udorn, Thailand, 15 minutes away. Then an Air Force hospital jet will take them to Clark Air Base, north of Manila. If a checkup shows that Mr. Kay does not require hospitalization, he is expected to fly to his bome in Hawaii or to stop in Goam with friends, an embassy spokesman said.

Mr. Kay has been a prisoner in Sam Neua since his small plane ran out of fuel on May 7, 1973, and he landed in Pathet Leo territory. He was flying for an American charter airline.

Soviet Immigrants to Israel Find Many Social Problems

JERUSALEM, Sept. 17.-When Soviet authorities last spring gave Boris Rubenstein his permit to emigrate to Israel, the physicist ran home and embraced his wife. Natascha, and his children Da-niel, 8, and Ruth,

"There has been a growing hostility, particularly with the shortage of housing in Israeli soclety. With a shortage of resources, it creates a conflict," Mr. Markus said.

The peculiar problem of social isolation of the Russian Jewry here is but one reason why Jerusalem officials are privately look-ing with apprehension at the possibility of a Russian-American accord that could increase the number of Soviet Jews immigrat. ing to Israel.

"In practically every one of those areas, within the first two years of being in the country, the Russian immigrant is doing as well or better than every other immigrant group that we've ever words of soothing nobility, and what they express with respect to healing national traumas is an essential for America today. But anyone who has had a wound bandaged knows the process can be painful, physically for the patient, emotionally for the one who does the bandaging. After the most severe trial of the unity of the United States, the Civil War, the process of reconstruction was almost as tormenting as the fighting, and it left Abraham Lincoln, who used the phrase in his second inangural, murdered, and his successor, Andrew Johnson, impeached. Mr. Ford is discovering that the best of intentions in trying to close the bleeding edges left by Watergate and Vietnam bring cries of dismay from the country and of anger against himself.

In his news conference Monday night, the President admitted that his sweeping pardon of Mr. Nixon "created more antagonism" than he had anticipated. But, contrary to what many expected, he did not bring forward any new arguments or explanations for his decision; he did not, to his credit, capitalize on the emotional values of recent reports about the former President's health. Rather, he reaffirmed his conviction that in the long view the pardon would be best for the country. It was not, for those who felt the pardon premature, any more convincing than the original statement by President Ford, but it did have dignity.

As for the conditional amnesty granted to draft-evaders and deserters of the Vietnamese war, the President's plan came as no real surprise and it evoked the contradictory reactions that might have been ex-

> Such positions are irreconcilable. But it seems probable that, unlike Mr. Ford's action pardoning Mr. Nixon when he did, a majority of Americans will accept the Ford plan as a reasonable compromise between the conscience of individuals and the right of the state to summon them to service. It will obviously not be easy to apply equitably, but it does affirm a principle: That in the United States, social discipline is tempered by a recognition of personal conviction and individual will by responsibility to the community. The appointment of Charles Goodell, an opponent of the war, as chairman of a broadly representative presidential clemency board, indicates very clearly that vindictiveness is not a part of the President's approach to this thorny problem, and while many young Americans will probably remain abroad rather than submit to Mr. Ford's conditions, that will be their own choice. The presidential alternative is reasonable.

There is still much that must be done to heal America. The pardon to Mr. Nixon shook the confidence of many of Mr. Ford's fellow citizens in his ability to cope with that task, and the amnesty issue is closely tied, in the public mind, to that unfortunate step. Nevertheless, a beginning has been made. Not the happiest, perhaps, but still a beginning. And the President is comporting himself in a manner that could win the nation again to his support, if his acts match

'Next Step' in the Mideast

The high-level consultations which both serve diplomacy and substitute for diplomacy in the Mideast have now brought responsible officials from Israel, Egypt, Jordan and Syria to Washington. Such is the difficulty of getting all the pieces of the puzzle in place, however, that it remains undisclosed -and perhaps also unsettled-just what the long-awaited "next step" will be. The earlier troop - disengagement agreements between Israel and Syria did not so much establish momentum as exhaust the easy possibilities. The hard ones are now here.

When the October war ended last year. optimists hoped that the rough Arab-Israeli. stalemate which resulted could be translated by stages into a political settlement. But since then that stalemate of mutual exhaus tion has given way to a new and untested relationship based on the massive rearming of both sides. This rearmament is not only the basis of the recurrent war scares which sweep through the region, it turns the attention of both Arabs and Israelis away from negotiating. If the United States and the Soviet Union — the chief arms suppliers could have agreed on maintaining a certain balance, this surely would have made negotiations more likely. But the great powers have not agreed. This increases the burden on the local states.

In general, the Arabs wish to wait to take the "next step" until they better coordinate their position among themselves, and the Israelis wish to wait until they have put their relationship with the United States on a firmer long-term basis. Yet the degree of Arab coordination and the degree of American support of Israel will never be great enough to stifle the two sides' respective apprehensions. Negotiations cannot be put off indefinitely. For each side to wait for a "better" time is to risk losing control of events to new pressures, or to the desperate acts of others, particularly the Palestinians. Time, we suspect, helps no one.

In Washington last week, Israeli Premier Rabin disclosed that Israel was considering a further withdrawal into the Sinai Desert in exchange for Egyptian pledges to end economic and diplomatic "belligerency." The proposal fits Israel's fundamental proposition that it should play its territorial card not merely for a piece of paper such as a treaty but for a new relationship with its neighbors—a relationship that will substitute contacts and a process of trust-building for the old blank-wall negativism that has contributed already to the onset of four should involve Egypt rather than Jordan is. of course, debatable; everything in the region is. It seems to us, however, that Mr. Rabin is entirely right in suggesting that Arab and Israeli negotiators and publics-should begin to consider jointly the kind of relationship they wish to produce by the negotiation process. A map with agreed boundaries is, after all, only one component of peace, although for many Arabs it has long been regarded as the essential one, if not the only one. The other component of peace is the nature of the relationship between the states on either side of the boundary lines. In practical terms, the size of Israeli concessions in terms of territory is likely to reflect quite precisely the size of Arab concessions in terms of the quality of their relationship with Israel. This cuts both ways; each side, that is, has the deepest self-interest in satisfying the other. The "next step" in the Mideast, no matter which countries join in it, is going to have to reflect this basic requirement.

Japanese Terrorism

Regardless of the motive, this violence (of Japanese terrorists at The Hague) is bound to be scorned by the world.

The problem cannot be simply resolved by attributing it to the peculiarity of the Japanese character. It stems rather from the social and spiritual features of Japan. have been raised on the CIAin-Chile front. The first is whether State Department officials deceived congressional committees by reporting that the United States government had taken no action to frustrate the inauguration or success of Salvador Allende as president of Chile. The second is whether the United States government should have done so. Needless to say the sec-ond question, which is more important than the first, is receiving practically no ettention. The first absorbs the front page.

Frankly, I do not know what is the correct prescription for State Department officials appearing before congressional committees that ask deeply sensitive questions. The routine answer is to demur, on the grounds of executive privilege. But that privilege, as we all know, is in high disrepute these days, so that congressional interrogators tend to press on, where yesterday they'd have let things lie.

How, for instance, would you, if you served as an ambassador say to Hitler Germany, and you were collusively intriguing with the resistance movement, answer such a question as: "Mr. Ambassador, is the State Department engaged in any contacts whatever with the apposition to the official government of the Third Reich?" You could say: "No"-which would be a lie. You could say: "Yes" -which would be the truth, and would blow the operation. Or you could say: "I can't discuss that." In which case the pressyes, the press, because as we have just seen with the supposedly secret testimony of CIA chief William Colby before a congressional committee, in due course we all end up reading what he said-is invited to draw inferences, namely that in fact you are in touch with the resistance.

Balance Need

To this dilemma there is no easy solution. On the one hand, we acknowledge that some operations, in order to succeed, have got to be carried on secretly. On the other hand, a republic ought to maintain machinery to super-vise the operations of the executive. As ever, the need is for a balance of the two considers-

A milestone in watchmaking history.

The electronic Omega Megaquartz 2400: the first wristwatch to be officially endorsed as a "Marine Chronometer".

63 days of tests have redefined the notion of time.

Translated from "La Suisse Horlogère" of April 4, 1974, official organ of the Swiss Chamber of Watchmaking.

"In view of the extraordinary performances of the Megaquartz 2'400, two of these timepieces were submitted to the Neuchâtel Observatory to pass the very demanding tests of a Marine Chronometer."

They passed the tests with ease and Omega is now in possession of two Marine Chronometer certificates. This is a world premiere in watchmaking.

In fact, to date no wristwatch had received this endorsement, which was reserved until now for larger timepieces.

The results obtained by the two watches were far superior to the Observatory criteria. To quote an example, the variation allowed by the Neuchâtel Observatory for the rate-resumption is ± 1.5 seconds. The two watches obtained a result of 0,005 and 0,003 of a second respectively."

A Marine Chronometer: the very image of precision and reliability.

A Marine Chronometer is one of the key instruments used in navigation. Human lives may depend on its function and precision. It must therefore be absolutely trustworthy, and so the tests Marine Chronometers must pass are merciless.

So far a Marine Chronometer was a bulky instrument whose movement could reach 90 cubic inches. Measuring only about ¹/₃ of a cubic inch, the movement of the Megaquartz 2'400 is about 300 times smaller and gives the same dependability; in fact, it goes far beyond the standard demanded.

The secret of the exceptional precision of the Megaquartz 2'400.

Given that it is also regular, the more rapid the "beat" of a watch, the greater is its precision. In the Megaquartz 2'400, a wafer-thin quartz-crystal resonator vibrates 2,359,296 times a second. This kind of frequency, together with the new resources of micro-electronics, is one of the decisive factors which gives this fascinating watch its unprecedented accuracy.

Dependability matching precision.

Provided its battery is changed once a year, an electronic watch will work autonomously for many years. It follows that its accuracy should be maintained over the same length of time. After all, there is little purpose in breaking precision records if slight shocks or weak magnetic influences can disturb the correct timekeeping of a watch.

Omega precision and dependability are one and the same thing. For example, before leaving the factory the movement of an Omega electronic watch has passed more than 1.000 controls. The Megaquartz 2'400 has also been tested to withstand a shock equivalent to 5.000 times the force of gravity.

Special features.

Important features of the Omega Megaquartz 2'400 include a device for synchronization with an official time signal, and a special magnetic clutch — a time-zone changer — for international traveling.

These features all contribute to the individuality of the Megaquartz 2'400, making it truly exclusive.

The Megaquartz 2'400: distinguished leader of the Omega electronic range.

The Omega Megaquartz 2'400 Marine Chronometer is unique. It sets new standards for the electronic watch. And it is not alone in the Omega collection. Here may be found watches using the most sophisticated electronic systems: sonic resonators, quartz-crystal resonators and solid state with digital readout.

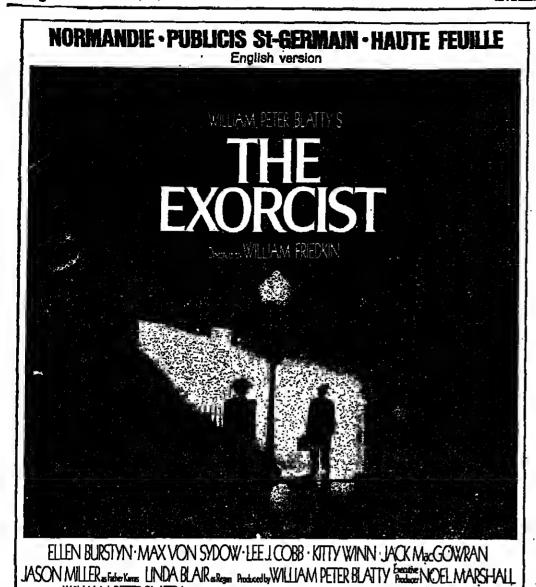

The choice of systems and styles offered by Omega and the price range of their electronic models is unequalled in the watch industry.

The Shawls Appearing In Paris

By Hebe Dorsey

DARIS, Sept. 17 (IET) .- With the last days of fall sunshine, street feshions are still neither here nor there. Yet, one trend is breaking out all over town:

Shawls have been lurking in the background for a number of years. One can trace them to London where young women have been wearing them over jeans and long skirts with that indepen-dent, nonestablishment British spirit. In Paris, shawls have been around too but less obviously. One saw them mostly on young actresses who found them handy during rehearsals.

Saint Laurent made a flooryear ago but it went unnoticed In a more flamboyant spirit, Frederic Castet did a beautiful fringed white mink shawl for Dior furs this season. Karl Lagerfeld also had shawls made of chestnut ermine for Fendi furs in Rome.

They tried to be like Evel Knievel, who tried to fly over the Snake River, but they land-ed abruptly in a hospital here.

Doctors reported last week that two boys 8 and 12 years old were seriously injured, and that a number of others within that age range received minor injuries in hicycle stants inspired by Mr. Knievel's widely publicised motorcycle and Sky-Cycle

After talks with the young patients and their parents, au-thorities at Babies Hospital noted a dangerous pattern to the stunts: The boys are building crude wooden ramps, pedaling their bicycles up the ramps, then trying to catapault over a line of trash cans.

A check of other hospitals produced only two reports of "playing Evel Knievel" on bi-

At Bables Hospital, however, Dr. Russell Asnes, director of the pediatric ambulatory care division, characterized the stunts as "widespread."

"The kids are really caught up in the Evel fervor," Dr. Asnes said. "The television carried a special on Seturday night just before he made his big jump, showing him jumping over 10 trucks or whatever he does, and this is what the kids are trying to imitate." Michael Coleman was among those who tried and failed. A venturesome 12-year-old, Michael was admitted to the hospital with a perforated in-testine caused while playing Evel with friends. According to Dr. Roger Mac-Millan, the assistant attending Surgeon, Michael's misadventures began when the home-made ramp collapsed, pitching him forward onto the bicycle's handlebars.

"Michael likes to do daring things and exciting things," said Mrs. Anthony Coleman, his mother, who has two other sons, 11 and 14.

Calling the motorcycle stuntman, "the big thing with the kids here," Mrs. Coleman noted that, shortly after recovering from the shock of Michael'e accident, she learned that his younger brother had made an earlier jump.

"Nothing happened. He made. it," said Mrs. Coleman with a long sigh. "And they definitely won't do it again. In fact, I haven't seen the boys go near their bikes since Michael's been burt." .

Apparently, the message didn't get across in the hospital's other major "Evel Knievel" case, This involved an 8-year-old boy, operated on for a ruptured

Murder and Mayhem Dominate Screen

Andre Cayatte, suther-director of "Verdict," was a Parisian at-torney before turning to the cinems. He knows the intricacles of legal procedure, the criminal and domestic courts, and the psychology of judges, lawyers, juries and prisoners. His reproduction of them is almost always persuasive, and in his scenarios he usually argues a case with convincing skill

His early "Nous Sommes Tous des Assassins" remains an im-passioned plea against capital punishment. In "La Vie Conjngale," he amusingly recounted an incompatible couple seeking a divorce, picturing their marital troubles, first as remembered by the husband and then as recalled by the wife.

"Verdict" (at the Berlitz, the Gaumont Ambassade and the Chmy Palace) is something different again a suspense thriller. A youth is on trial for the murder of a girl and the veteran judge before whom he stands is harshly prejudiced against him. The boy's mother instigates the kidnapping of the judge's alling wife. The ransom she asks is the acquittal of the son. The mother's maneuver, however, brings disaster to all. Cayatte, telling two stories simultaneously—that of the crime and that of the consequences of the crime-has manipulated their interplay dexterously and given probable shape to the principal figures of his script; casting them most happily.

It is rumored that Jean Gabin is contemplating retirement. His withdrawal would be a staggering blow to the French cinema; in-deed, to international cinema. Who sise today could portray Cayatte's crusty old jurist with such seasoned mastery? His is a characterization of size and strength, one of the finest performances in his long career. Sophis Loren rises to the challenge of the difficult role of the mother to display unexpected histrionic versatility, and Michel Albertini, as the son resentful of smothering maternal devotion, makes an anspicious debut.

That the film is a director's medium is aptly filmstrated when one compares "Gold" (at the Marignan in English) with "Marseilles Contract" across the Champs-Elysées (at the Ermitage in English).

The basic materials of "Gold" offer by far the more inviting opportunities. It was shot in South Africa so that the scene itself provides some novelty. It deals, though gingerly, with the white man's exploitation of the mines, manued by black labor. Peter Hunt, its director, has, alas, neglected the potentialities

Robert Parrish, who directed "Marseilles Contract," has had long and fruitful training in movie making. He began at 12, playing a drummer boy in "The Divine Lady" and later was a cutter at RKO when Orson Welles's "Citizen Kane" was being edited. He has profited by his experience and out of a routine cops-and-drug-traffickers nelodrama has extracted a competent and attention-holding motion picture. The statement was made by Abdulatif al-Hamad, director general of the Kuwait Pund for Arab Economic Development, at a con-ference here today sponsored by Bankers Trust.

He said that Kuwait and other Arab countries are particularly anxious to encourage direct investment in their own countries and that multinational firms offering such projects could be the main recipient of oil-producers'

"Other than oil, we only have desert. Obviously, we need to build industries and the infrastructure to support them before our oil resources run out by the end of the century." Mr. al-Hamad said.

Suggestions that oil-producing countries channel their revenues into loans to the oll-consumingstates through international institutions, such as the Internstional Monetary Fund, appear to have a low priority.

This idea was proposed again today at the conference being

George Ball, former U.S. under secretary of state and now a partner of Lehman Brothers, proposed that a separate institution be set up to finance oil imports through issuance to the oil producers of a perpetual debenture similar to Britain's consols.

Not Interested

Mr. al-Hamad indicated, however, that the oil-producing states with big surplus revenues such as Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Abu Dhabi are not particularly interested in such ideas.

Mr. al-Hamad said the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) quadrupled crude oil prices partly to dis-courage wasteful consumption of a scarce and limited resource. A related consideration, he explained, was that oil producers have been receiving payment in financial assets whose purchasing power has been diminishing because of a decline in exchange rates and an increase in inflation. "Petrofunds should be used for achieving a higher and better

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

DAF, the only car maker in the Netherlands, has agreed in principle for Volvo of Sweden to acquire a majority interest in DAF Car. The firms hope final agreement can be reached by the end of this year for the pact to become operational Jan. 2, 1975. Volvo has had a 33 per cent interest in DAF Car since 1972, and talks in recent months have centered on the Swedish car maker increasing its participation to 75 per cent. The agreement only concerns the car part of the DAF group and not other divisions including DAF Trucks, in which International Harvester of the United States has a 33 per cent interest. DAF says the Dutch government backs closer cooperation with Volvo. The sales operations of the two com-panies have been integrated in the Netherlands and parts of Scandanavia for some time.

Rolls Gets Boeing to Extend Project

Rolls Royce (1971) Ltd. chairman Sir Kenneth Keith says he has persuaded Boeing to continue work on the project to use RB-211-524 engines until he meets Boeing officials on Friday. This follows last week's statement by Boeing that it decided to shelve plans to use the uprated 534 version of Rolls' RB-211 engine in 747 jumbo jets. Sir Kenneth flies to the United States Wednesday for talks with both Lockheed which uses the RB-211 in its TriStars, and Boeing. The British government has linked the provision of around £40 million of production finance to the winning of firm airline orders for the engine.

Alberta Gas Leaves Study Group Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. is withdrawing from the 26-company consortium which is studying plans to build a $6-billion, 2,600-mile pipe-line to carry Alaskan and Canadian Arctic natural gas to southern markets mostly in the United States. Robert Blair, president of Alberta Gas Trunk, indicates the gas-gathering and transmission concern would incorporate a separate company, which could build an all-Canadian pipeline that would not require gas volumes from Alaska's Prudhoe Bay to be profitable. Mr. Blair, who only last month proposed an all-Canadian pipeline as an alternative to the larger and more expensive Alaskan-Canadian project, says that "complete withdrawal (from the study group) was needed to harden the final decisions . . . of expediting complete definition and commencement of the (pipeline) project, which it now seems Canada will need sooner than expected." He has supported a pipeline proposal to tap McKenzie delta and Beaufort basin gas reserves in the Canadian Northwest Territories for Canadian markets at cost of about $3.25 billion. Alberta Gas Trunk, which has consistently supported any pipeline from the Arctic connecting with exsting transmission facilities in sourthern Canada, was apparently rebuffed last year when the consortium decided its 48-inch line would run directly to the U.S. border. The Alberta Gas proposal involved a 42-inch line that would connect with existing facilities, including its own, and require expansion of these lines.

Adding to the prime rate speculation was a comment from Chase Manhattan Bank chairman David Rockefeller that if current short-term interest rate trends continue, a 10 per cent prime rate is likely by year-end. Mr. Rockefeller presented bts view at a bankers conference in

Record year for British Steel Corporation-$134 million profit

1973-74 sees best ever performance by Europe's largest steelmaker.

A record pre-tax consolidated profit of $134 million, which can be compared with $22 million in 1972-73, was achieved in a year of domestic industrial unrest and a world energy crisis, which caused an estimated loss of revenue of $287 million through reduced production.

Development programme

During the year the $562 million 'Anchor' development at Scunthorpe was completed, and visited by Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II on May 6th, 1074. Production in the first six months was the highest achieved for that period by a new Basic Oxygen Steelmaking plant anywhere in the world.

Other major projects completed in 1973 were the new ore and coal port facilities at Immingham and on Teesside.

The main thrust of the $7.5 billion development programme still lies ahead but it is already well under way and during the year nearly $478 million was spent. Work started on Scotland's giant ore and coal terminal at Hunterston to support the $230 million expansion of steelmaking at Rayenscraig: In Wales, expansion of a similar order at Llauwern went ahead and work was started on ironmaking developments at Port Talbot, while in Sheffield new projects will cost $108 million.

In January 1974 the Corporation made a successful public bond issue of $50 million. The bonds are quoted on the London Stock MAJOR DEVELOPMENTS Exchange.

Operating successes

Along with record profits and extensive investments, the Corporation has had significant operating successes.

Its constructional subsidiary, Redpath Dorman Long (North Sea) Limited, has completed one of the first two British North Sea platforms. Ninety per cent of the North Sea demand for oil and gas well tubing and casing was met by the Corporation.

An unrelenting drive for greater efficiency has resulted in an 18% increase in productivity since the Corporation began to operate. Energy savings have been made amounting to 12% for each tonne of iron produced.

Overseas activities

British Steel Corporation (International) Ltd. is the subsidiary which holds and manages the Corporation's $196 million interests outside the United Kingdom and is responsible for investment in new projects overseas. Pre-tax profit of the BSC International Group, including the Group's share of profits earned by associated companies, was $31.5 million (compared with $26.5 million last year). The Group and its associates are involved in tubemaking and the manufacture of associated products and fittings, many different forms of steelwork fabrication and engineering, electric furnace steelmaking, merchanting and distribution, and the mining of raw materials used in the production of steel.

Rednath Dorman Long was also active on the international front. The Rio-Niteroi bridge in Brazil, opened in March 1974. includes the longest span box girder construction in the world. It was built with BSC steel by Redpath Dorman Long Limited, working in partnership with The Cleveland Bridge and Engineering Company in association with Montreal Engenharia S.A.

During 1973-74 the Corporation's export sales of steel products totalled $669 million.

New Chairman

In September 1973, Dr. H. M. Finniston FRS, previously Deputy Chairman and Chief Executive, was appointed Chairman in succession to the late Lord Melchett, Chairman of the Corporation since its formation, who died tragically on June 15th, 1973. Dr. Finniston takes over as the biggest industrial merger in history becomes a profitable reality.

Work on Soviet Dam Slo By Loss of Skilled Work

By Christopher S. Wren

MOSCOW, Sept. 17 (NYT).— Completion of the world's largest hydroelectric power dam is being hindered by some perennial probindustry, including inadequate living conditions, a high labor turnover and shortage of working equipment

The Sayan Dam, which is being built across the fast-flowing Yenisel River in the heart of eastern Siberia; is one of the major projects in the Soviet master plan for the development of hydroelectric power, and sequently industry, in the expanses of Siberla.

Once completed, the 700-foothigh power dam is expected to have a capacity of 6.36 million

While initial work oo the prior-lty project began 10 years ago. poor planning, procrastination and bureaucratic bungling by the Ministry of Power and Electrificatioo have blocked progress and sent discouraged skilled workers looking for other jobs, according to criticism leveled recently by the newspaper Sovetskaya Ros-

The major headaches have been more lingering since Fravda pre-dicted them in a prominent edito-

At the time, skilled construc-tion crews completing works on the Krasnoyarsk power dam, one of the world's largest, were willing to move on to the new Savan site. On Sept. 17, 1968, Pravda warned that their talents might be lost because there were not enough living quarters to accommodate them.

Housing still to be built under the initial plans cannot take care of 1,500 people "who already badly need it." And while it was originally expected that there would be 11,000 workers at most at the dam, 19,000 are now expected at the peak of construc-

The International Monetary Market would like to make the following announcement: We were right.

At the risk of sounding terribly immodest, our concept of bringing foreign currency futures trading to the public has proved to be extremely functional. Public interest is astonishing. Our timing was superb—and no accident.

After years of research, we opened for business two years ago, just as the post-World War II rigid monetary exchange system fell apart.

Floating exchange rates are here to stay and with them, the opportunity for profit (or loss) on currency fluctuations is here to stay. The need for importers and exporters to hedge selling prices is here to stay. And, consequently, we're here to stay.

We are not relaxing in contentment, however. To our original contracts in foreign currency futures, we have added U.S. and Canadian silver coins and we will be adding more contracts in the near future. We have a gold contract ready for trading whenever the President approves gold ownership for U.S. citizens.

We're proud of what we've created and we'd like to tell you more about it. Just send us the coupon.

LORD ROCHESTER'S MONKEY By Graham Greene. Illustrated. Viking. 231 pp.

Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

S he lay dying in 1679, the Earl and pornographer, of Rochester expressed the hope that his only son might never be a wit. As the greatest wit of his time, he knew what it had cost him. Once recognized, he could never relent. Like Ixion on his wheel, he had to centinue all his life, turning phrases, writing satires, outraging his peers as a form of shock therapy to joit them out of their idiocy. Irreverent by definition, ha could not take anything seriously: Rochester's most famous poem is "Upon Nothing." He had to buzz from nothing to nothing, like a bee seeking nourish-ment among artificial flowers. His wit could afford no exceptraying a lively, attractive wife for a mistress only to betray her in turn with the rankest prostitutes of the age.

When Charles II ascended the throne of England, you might say that wit became the law of the land. The court was obsessed with it. A man's reputation could be made or destroyed by a quip. Rochester literally lived by his wit: all the King's favors issued from it 'The early part of Charles's reign may be one of the most eurious periods in history. The King was poor, and no one knew what tomorrow might hring. Rochester's wit was of the gallows sort. He lived to provoke, for, as he said. "I hate still-life." It was a way, too, of repudiating the debauched round of the court while continuing to embrace it. The King and his friends could pretend that they rose above their self-indulgence in satire.

Graham Greene wrote the first version of "Lord Rochester's Monkey between 1931 and 1934, but his publisher refused it on the ground that it would not get past the censors. Mr. Greene has now rewritten and revised the book to include whatever else we have learned about Rochester in the last 40 years. It is a fascinating and at the same time frustrating book, for there is something aisquieting in seeing so many talented men—including John Dryden-strain for ephemeral cifects.

Students of the game tend to be both surprised and irritated when they find that world champions can flout basic principles and get away with it. The flouter on the diagramed deal from the 1973 world championship in Brazil was Benito Bianchi of Livorno, Italy. He deservedly won his first world title on that occasion as the new partner for the great Pietro Forquet of Naples, and repeated his success this year.

Over a strong artificial club opening by East, Bianchi content-ed himself with a jump to three spaces on a hand on which four spades on a nand on which your spades would seem an automatic choice. West doubled, showing moderate high-card strength, not necessarily in spades, and East hid four diamonds in the hope of helps the hid five clubs. of being able to bid five clubs on the next round.

The basic principle of pre-emptive bidding is to bid the limit immediately and then maintain a discreet slience. It is not clear what would have happened if South had held his peace at this point. West might have raised to five diamonds, the wrong contract for East-West but one that happens to be un-beatable in spite of the four-one trump break

However, Bisnchi corrected his previous underbid by hidding four spades, and West was happy to double for pensities. East, to his subsequent regret, then changed his mind about bidding his clubs at the five-level. It was clear that his partner held assets in spades that would be useless in a minorsuit contract.

The defense began on the right track when West led the diamond king and continued with the jack South ruffed and made a good decision by leading a low spade. Later, he said that it would probably be held "somewhere between the 22d and 28th of October."

Sadler told a crowded room of journalists, many of whom had just arrived, that the cut above Foreman's eye was closed with butterflies and not stitched as was first reported here. He said that he performed the brief operation with two Zairian doctors and Foreman's personal physician, Peter Hacker, standing by watch-ing. "I prefer not to stitch. I'd like for the wound to heal naturally from the inside outside," Sadier said.

And All Talks On

He said Foreman and All would visit the interior of the country while awaiting the rescheduled match. He said that the two fighters themselves suggested that they stay here.

. But All said nothing about this, at the white stucco house on the edge of the Zaire River where he is living while in training. The house is next to President Mobutu's villa at the N'scie presidential complex 30 miles outside Kinshasa. All was showing signs of irritation and disappointment over the postponement of the fight, for which he says he has worked extremely hard. He launched into an hourlong tirade against white America and sung the praises of the accomplishments of black Africa. I feel totally free here. I wish all black people in Amer-It's hard to believe that black people could do all these things. But your example is living proof that we can do these things," he

All kept insisting the match was a "holy war" between himself, a black revolutionary Muslim, and Foreman, who represents the white man of America." Meanwhile, Foreman's sparring partner McMurray said at the N'sele complex he was just try-ing to protect himself from the blows Foreman was raining down upon him when he lifted his elbow and accidentally hit the champion's eye.

The 34-year-old truck driver from California said he had only been Foreman's sparring partner for the past six weeks. He said he got the job because he was a good friend of Henry Clark, another of Foreman's sparring partners.

Courageous Ends Australia's Agony

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 17 (UPI). — U. S. defender Courageous, whose owners had second thoughts about building her, smoothly whipped Southern Cross today for a fourth straight victory, ending Australia's best-financed, best-organized chalenge for the America's Cup.

Courageous won by 7 minutes 19 seconds for the widest margin of victory in the 1974 series. The U. S. 12-meter yacht won by 4:54 in the first race, 1:11 in the second and 5:27 in the third race.

Yanks: Unlikely Leader

By Joseph Durso

They are a strange bunch, these New York Yankees. They were 50-to-1 shots when the baseball season began. They go to work every day in somebody else's park. They play for a manager of a pennant race in Pittsburgh last September, and who was second choice in New York after Ralph Houk left and Dick Williams escaped. And half of them languished someplace else last season without distinction.

Their best pitcher, Mel Stottlemyre, has had a sore arm for four months and hasn't pitched in two. Their best hitters, Bobby Murcer and Thurman Munson. both are having off-years. Their best bet for the future, Ron Blomberg, presumably can't hit left-handers. Their infield lacks a double-play combination. Their principal owner, George Stein-brenner, got into trouble with the government over political contributions. And the only pennant that flaps over the stadium belongs to the Mets. They are run by men with bankrolls and with a free-trade policy, but when they got around to making trades they didn't land Frank Robinson, Orlando Cepeda, Claude Osteen or Jimmy Wynnthough somebody else did. Instead, they landed Lou Piniella, who lost 62 points from his batting average at Kansas City last year; Jim Mason, who added nine points to his batting average at Texas and raised it all the way up to 206; Elliott Maddox, who hit 238 at Texas, and Bill Sudakis, who made the disabled list twice, failed to make the Mets once and later was unloaded for the anonymous "player to be named later" Unlikely Brew In April, they sent four players to Cleveland and got three in return: Chris Chambliss, who battled 273 last season; Dick Tidrow, a pitcher who lost 16 games, and Cecil Upshaw, who pitched for three teams and won two games. In May, they added Larry

"One day I was sitting in a corner of the bench," Sheehy went on. "It was a dreary day, and Babe Ruth had just hit his 60th home run. No fuss, no taperecorders, no television cameras. I just sat there thinking that he hit 60 this year, he'll probably hit 61 next year. Were they the best baseball team ever? They had to be—they'd be four runs down and never ont of the game. You'd always be waiting for that big inning, and it would come often."

"About a month ago," Sheehy said, vaulting 50 years in Yankee history, "they started to get the feeling that they might win. They're still not Ruth and Gehrig or Mantle and Maris. The only reminder of the old days is White Ford, and he and I talk about it

Tonight the outcasts of Shee Stadium will report for work as usual in the Jets' clubbouse. They still have nothing in common with the old Yankee powers except that they're leading their race by 2 1/2 games with 15 left to play. 'Last April, what did I think it would take for this club to win?" asked Sheehy, their one link to the past. "I thought it would take an awful lot of Hail Mary's."

Former President Nixon is in such harsh straits that the Congress is considering giving him $851,000 to get settled in California, Nelson Rockefeller has told Congress that he is worth only $33 million, an admission that will change his life forever once its full import has been absorbed by his creditors.

For the first time, now that the scantiness of his capital is known, Rockefeller will be hearing from the demon credit manager of the Lord & Taylor department store when his bill becomes two months overdue. Going South to See Belgium's Riviera

TORGNY, Belgium (IHT) -Meteorologists talk about a unique "miniclimate," archaeologists about the remarkable artifacts recovered from digs at neolithic sites and in the rich 7th-century Merovingian cemetery near this village (population 210), which owes it name to a Roman military encampment called Tauriniacum.

Botanists and soologists use terms like "incredible" and "remarkable" and write reports on the numerous unique species of floral and faunal life found in these fecund calcareous acres, north of the 49th parallel and some 300 meters above sea level. It is the southernmost community in the Gaume. Belgium's southernmost district.

The locals talk about their town and its upland as "our Belgian Provence" or "our Belgian Riviera." But the architecture on both sides of the meandering French-Belgian border is typical of Lorraine, with "Roman" roof tiles and wooden window shutters.

Torgny, however, is sheltered in many ways. 'The Mountain,' better known as the Ardennes chain, keeps out icy winter weather from the north and the east. The only winds that blow in Torgny are the gentle ones from the south and west. The result is a climate of Mediterranean type and a wildlife similar and sometimes identical to that of the French Midi some 450

The July-August tourists that crowd the highway from Luxembourg and Arlon to Virton and Montmedy seldom find the two country roads winding south through fields and pastures. The one road sign pointing the way is effectively hidden by greenery in central Lamortean and a fairly sophisticated road map is needed to find Lamorteau in

"We have visitors, of course," said George Petit, keeper of the two local vineyards and curator of the five-hectare Raymond Mayné scientific reserve, operated by the nonprofit Ardennes et Gaume association. The people taking the trouble to ferret us out are generally archaeologists or naturalists professionals or amateurs—who want to see the archaeological sites or the reserve."

The reserve, to a field biologist, is a must in northern Europe, in class with the Zwin in northwest Flanders and the Hornborgs Lake in south-central Sweden. The limit soil and the gentle winds provide an excellent biome for sensitive plants, attracting in turn certain insects that depend on the plants for survival.

"I don't mind bragging a bit," said Mr. Petit, 'but we have some 125 species of plants in the reserve, including 32 species of rare orchids, among the various roses, anemones and brambles. A number of the plants are being of no practical use to anyone but a Butterfly Country

Flowers tend to attract insects such as the black June bug, the praying mantis, cicades and blue-winged locusts. And, of course butterflies.

One may observe some 150 species of butterflies in the reserve, some of which arefound only here.

There are reptiles too, including the subterranean blindworm, collared grass-snakes and various lizards. Hovering overhead are buzzards and kites (black and royal) and magpies of various species. Local mammals include a couple of variants of dormice and fieldmice. In the woods are genuine wildcats, not merely abandoned specimens of Felis domesticus.

On the banks of the Chiers, the border river (which would be classed a brook anywhere else in the world), are American or Canadian muskrats (Ondatra zibethica to biologists, musquash to Algonitian Indians.) "Don't ask me how they got there," said Mr. Petit, "but there they are, in increasing numbers. We may assume that they didn't swim across the Atlantic."

The relations between the Belgians and the French must be good, for the border signs are often obscured by the greenery and a visitor making a wrong turn off the main street may find himself a quite illegal immigrant in France, in front of the cafetabac in Epiez or Velomes.
